New Delhi: The Indian Agriculture Ministry along with the US Agency for International Development (USAID) launched the second phase of the "Feed the Future India-Triangular Training Program", to provide agriculture trainings to 1,500 agricultural professionals across Africa and Asia.

The countries participated include Cambodia, Afghanistan, Myanmar, Vietnam, Mongolia, Lao PDR, Liberia, Kenya, Vietnam, Malawi, Ghana, Rwanda, Mozambique, Democratic Republic of Congo, Sudan, Tanzania, Uganda and Botswana.

"The impact assessments carried out for the first phase of the programme generated positive feed-back. The US is thus, expanding it to seventeen more countries. Our participation in the programme displays our soft power," said Shobhana K Pattanayak, Agriculture Secretary at the launch.

Three countries including Liberia, Kenya and Malawi were provided training in the first phase of the programme, funded by USAID and jointly implemented by India's National Institute of Agricultural Extension Management.

"This exciting new program marks not only a significant step forward for the US-India bilateral partnership, but reinforces our commitment to work together as global partners," said U.S. Ambassador Richard R. Verma at the event.

The program will train agricultural professionals in farming practices like agricultural marketing, and dairy management.
